

AMERICAN STUDIES MAJOR

Program Director: Asim A. Ali, Ph.D.

American Studies provides students with a flexible, coherent, and interdisciplinary program of study. We focus on the cultures of everyday lives and cultural constructions of identity and difference in Americans' lives, past and present, in a transnational and global framework. The B. A. degree prepares students for graduate work or careers in fields such as law, government and social policy, media, non-profit and social justice organizations, cultural institutions, education, and business. The department provides opportunities for internships, research, study abroad, and departmental honors. Each student meets every semester with a faculty advisor to plan an individualized course of study tailored to each student's interests and goals. American studies is a small department with a friendly atmosphere, faculty dedicated to teaching, and an excellent national academic reputation. Courses offered by the Department of American Studies may be found under the acronym AMST.

Admission to the Major

Students interested in declaring the American Studies major should make an appointment with the undergraduate program director.

Program Learning Outcomes

Students are expected to engage fully with the curriculum, faculty, their fellow students, and the opportunities available for learning and research. Upon completion of the degree program, students will have demonstrated an understanding of multiple dimensions of diversity, possess the ability to answer research questions by using appropriate American Studies methodologies, and have acquired the following knowledge and skills:

1. Understanding and applying interdisciplinary theories and methods.
2. Understanding American Studies as a field, including current and emerging issues.
3. Understanding of cultural literacy, including visual, textual and cybercultural literacies.
4. Understanding the political and historical dimensions of culture.
5. Understanding the importance of cultural diversity in American society.
6. An ability to connect classroom and extracurricular learning in fostering active, engaged citizenship.
